

Danny Ferrington One of the Few Truly Original Luthiers

Patty Pinkstaff, 2018

Danny Ferrington

Master Guitar Maker That Built Ken Pinkstaff's Acoustic Guitars

Fretboard Guitar Journal held an event on January 22 for guitar maker Danny Ferrington in Los Angeles.

Watch this impromptu performance of Warren Zevon's "Carmelita," performed by Jackson Browne, writer/musician

Adam Levy and Danny Ferrington himself.

Musicians, not guitar makers, are who I've paid attention to. I've known how to make them for a long time but I continue to learn from musicians, that's what has guided me in my craft.

I have lived in Los Angeles since 1980. I've accomplished so much with this craft in my life. It will never get better than my dear friend George Harrison when we first met tell me he had played a guitar I had done for Jeff Lynne, he said, "I knew when I played that guitar that you did for Jeff, that you knew something."

Follow Danny on

<https://twitter.com/DannyFerrington>

<https://www.facebook.com/pages/Danny-Ferrington/194366104043272>

Here is a man that has crafted guitars, mandolins, violins and more for elite of the entertainment world and remains an incredibly humble individual.

Danny's instruments are known for quality and unusual design and this book showcases his exceptional craftsmanship and amazing detail.

Danny Ferrington one of the few truly original luthiers out there.